

BRAMBLE AND COULTOON

THEIR HEBRIDEAN ADVENTURE
Catherine Wilson Ruth MacLean

One day while they were grazing, Bramble said to Coultoon in between munches, "I wonder if anything ever happens on the other side of Jura."

And Coultoon said, "I know. I've got a tent and we can take the tent for shelter and we can go and explore."

So they took a bag of Islay peat, a kettle and their tent, and they trotted off towards Jura with Coultoon leading the way and Bramble eagerly in pursuit. The peat was for a fire. The kettle was for making tea.

Sample pages from Bramble and Coultoon showing original pen drawings by Catherine Wilson, translated into colour paper cut-outs by Ruth MacLean